City Officials Have Three Franchises To Deal With

Contracts for Street Lights, Domestic Electric Power and Fuel Gas To Be Considered Within Short Period for First Time in History of Municipality.

For perhaps the first time in the history of Marion, Ohio, the city officials are faced with the task of dealing with three franchises at once.

They are the franchises for the street lighting, domestic electric power and fuel gas.

Although no definite action has been taken, it is probable that the city will be granted the three franchises by the city council within a short time.

The street lighting franchise is held by the city. The electric power franchise is held by the city. The fuel gas franchise is held by the city.

'Meanest' Man Poisons Dog

Second Canine Owned by Sheriff John J. Francis in Victim, One Dies.

Marion's meanest man is being sought by Sheriff John J. Francis following the poisoning of two of his six Llewellyn setters.

One of the two was poisoned and died while Francis was quarantined for smallpox several weeks ago, while the other was the victim of the poisoner in the last few days and is expected to live.

Anyone who would poison a dog is pretty low in the scale of human life, Francis declared today.

If anyone has a grudge against me and is taking it out on the dogs I'd rather had meet me face to face and battle it out with me," he said.

The first dog poisoned was valued at $170.

Mimes Hard Workers

"POLLY" With A Pat, the mimes' public production is presented the week after Easter Sunday, is rehearsing nightly in the studios. Round Dora Davis, who does the intriguing "Polly," can rattle off French like popcorn out of an electric popper—so it sounds to one who flunked French straight through a two years' course.

Dorothy D. Tway, the director, probably won't want to see a stage play for years, unless it is to see a play with which she has nothing whatever to do backstage or in directing. These mimes are gay and carefree people, though they do seem serious about learning lines, even in a play. After three hours of rehearsing almost every night, the cast gets together and has a concert of everything from "Sweet Adeline" to "Moonlight and Flowers."

Everything but Lunches

JOSEPH M. JUSTICE, bailiff of common pleas court, might have become a good physician had he cared to enter that particular field. Justice dispenses first-aid to the injured when occasion at the courtroom demands. For such purpose, he keeps a medicine cabinet full of both time-worn and up-to-date remedies.

A jury member who by chance may have a speck of dirt irritating his eye can have the injured eye relieved by the use of an eye-wash in the defendant's hands of the bailiff, who handles all such emergency "operations."

Justice also keeps a bottle of menthol handy for any visitor who is suffering from an incipient cold. The menthol, he claims, is a sure cure for colds provided they have not reached too advanced a stage.

Antiseptic liquids of various sorts, bandages, and other supplies complete the medicine kit.

MONDAY'S astrological map holds surgery of the breaking away of some old obstacles, but also hints of complications and problems of a personal as well as business nature. These may be heightened by irritability or impulsiveness. It would be well to be on guard as to the physical safety.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of some personal as well as business complications and anxieties, which may be contributed to by a personal proclivity to impulsive actions or behavior. Care with correspondence and as to personal safety are enjoined. Some progress may be made by patience and diligence.

Loans totaling $28,450.77 were made on county property last week. The $5,000 figure represents mortgages on only three county properties, the remaining 17 being on city property. The number of mortgages, 20, was the same as last week.

Intricate Machinery Used in Census Work

WITHOUT the aid of intricate machinery used in compiling and tabulating the data to be collected in the 1930 census, it would be impossible to carry out the mammoth census program of the United States, according to Frank A. Berry, district supervisor.

Machinery to be used in this census will be much more efficient than it was 10 years ago, according to information received by Berry from the headquarters in Washington. New machines have been invented and old ones improved so that results will be published to the world more quickly and more accurately this year than they were in 1920, despite the fact that the population has increased by approximately 17 million.

Has Own Laboratory

The census bureau maintains its own mechanical laboratory, where new machines for tabulating census information are continually being designed and constructed. A new automatic machine that has just been developed, for instance, will perform the work done by 10 machines of the type used in 1920, and will do it more accurately. Another machine that will be used will sort 140,000 census cards daily, a task that would require the labor of 50 diligent clerks.

If the work of tabulation were done by hand, so many clerks and copyists would be needed that they would trample over each other trying to work, and the resultant errors would probably be so great that the statistics published would have little value. That the government is not interested in information about the individual is shown in a card system to be used this year. There is to be a separate card for every person in the nation, but there are no names on the cards. The information thus will have been turned into cold facts, for statistical purposes only.

Machine Uncanny

Various information is placed on these cards by the use of punched holes. A sorting machine, an apparatus with uncanny fingers which run across the cards to find where the holes have been punched, separates the cards into groups according to any particular information that is wanted.

SHE THOUGHT:

"You seem such a nice woman! Too bad 'B.O.' gives you away."

Yet, to be polite,

SHE SAID:

"Excuse me, I see an empty seat."

Avoided wherever she went

...until she ended "B.O."

THE OTHER seat was on the sunnyside. Not so desirable as this one. What made her young neighbor change? A trivial little incident, yet it spoiled her whole train trip. She remembered other similar experiences. For years, it seemed, people deliberately avoided her.

Now at last she knows the reason. "B.O."—body odor. She knows, too, the simple way to correct this distressing fault. Today she is no longer unwanted, has many warm friends. Loneliness vanished with "B.O."

"How can anyone have 'B.O.' and not know it?" you ask. Very simply. We all perspire. Pores give off a quart of odor-causing waste daily even in cool weather. We become so used to this ever-present odor that we don't notice it in ourselves. But others do!

Yet it's easy to avoid offending. Millions have found the way. Just wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. A delightful toilet soap—cleansing, refreshing, purifying. Its creamy, searching, antiseptic lather penetrates every pore—ends all danger of "B.O."

Keeps complexions clear, fresh

Lifebuoy keeps complexions young. Its bland, deep-cleansing lather gently frees clogged pores of impurities—keeps back radiant freshness to skin, soft, supple. Its pleasant extra-odor scent that vanishes as you rinse—helps Lifebuoy purify. Adapted to all skin types.

"Jacqueline On Her Own"

DRAMATIC STORY OF ACTION, ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE

BY RICHARD STARR
(Copyright 1939, by the Author)

CHAPTER 17
A Beggar's Romance

FOR Jacqueline Grey drifted to sleep at the close of the adventurous day of her life she found the events that were about to befall her in the morning were as remote as the clouds of the past. She had spent with Teddy Montrose everything she had in her power which in itself was a complete victory for a young man for Jacqueline had never thought about men.

She had decided to end their adventure at the door of the Montrose. Jacqueline had agreed that Teddy would stay for the first time she realized that it might lead to and it seemed that the one course was open to her. The adventure must end. He was a Montrose and she was a Montrose. The Montrose shipping company and it was obvious that he belonged to a different class of society. Her sojourn among the wealthy was not averse to blinding those who did not intend to let their drift into the affections of any man under false pretenses. A great gulf stretched between them and it seemed a very dreary expanse. Nevertheless it existed and she must face the fact.

The depressing thoughts of the night were temporarily forgotten in the joy of the moment when Teddy Montrose very punctually appeared the next day and took her to a dairy little tea shop in the west end.

There they found a cozy little corner where they might enjoy their tea.

At first Teddy was rather loath to be serious. Jacqueline liked him just as much by daylight as she had at night in his evening clothes.

"I should like to tell you something about myself," he said, with a straight face.

"Gracious! Do you mean confessions?"

He nodded. "If you feel it necessary to confess your past," returned Jacqueline sweetly. "I hope you don't expect me to do the same, because I am not going to."

Teddy waved his hand sketchily. "Forget it," he said. "You have no past."

"Haven't I? Don't you be too sure. I'm afraid my past would give you a serious shock."

But Teddy was too intent on his own part to bowl her. "I am a penniless orphan," he said. "Not exactly an orphan, but an outcast. You understand me?"

"I'm afraid I don't."

"It's rather difficult. But I've been all sorts of a fool. My father says so, and he ought to know, because he's said to me for me. I'm just beginning to realize it now, when it's too late. I'm the only son, you know, and I've down some name in my time—wild ones. Of course, the Old Top—that's the name, you know—has always named the table and roared, but the matter has smoothed things over and he has paid up. But lately the matter seems to have lost its charm somehow. The Old Top has been giving me a lot of anxiety—a lot of anxiety," Jacqueline chuckled.

Teddy dived down his collar and brought up a shilling suspended on a string. He held it out to her.

"This is what it has come to," he said. "The Old Top is rather conventional—does things by the book, so the saying goes. At our last interview, which was rather warm, he handed me this in an envelope. Of course I thought it was a check until I found out. He told me to get out—just like that."

"That was the last I should ever have from him," he said. "Nerves darkened my doors again, and so on. Frightfully unpleasant. I told him so, but it didn't make him laugh. Very difficult to get a joke across to the Old Top. I thought he was pulling my leg at first, but I found he was ridiculously serious. My allowance had been cut off, and the bank had been warned. They wouldn't even give me an overdraft."

"What is an overdraft?" inquired Jacqueline innocently.

"That's what you pay people with when you haven't got any money," explained Teddy. "Lucidly. That's what banks are for. What's the good of banks which will only pay out money which you have previously paid in to them? Not, I tell you."

"But what made your father so angry with you?" asked Jacqueline, vaguely conscious that the dreary golf which separated her from all thoughts of Teddy Montrose was not perhaps so wide as she had imagined.

"I had been going the pace a bit, doing the knots as they say. And the Warwickshire handicap put the lid on it."

"The Warwickshire handicap?" cried Jacqueline, remembering the famous race on which she had adventured five pounds.

"Yes," Teddy spoke with gloom. "I owned and ran a horse named Prinkipo."

Prinkipo! echoed Jacqueline.

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"I had some money on Prinkipo myself."

"Did you, though? I'm awfully sorry to hear that. He is a nice horse too, but they smothered him. He never had a chance. They crowded him to the rails, and he never would run unless he could see elbow room. He needs space, that horse to do his stuff. The other jockeys knew it, and so they crowded him in."

"He ought to have spread-eagled the field," said Jacqueline.

"Gee, so he should. You know something about racing. I can see. Well Prinkipo went down the hill, and altogether it cost me 17,000 pounds to foot the bill and clear up things generally."

"Seventeen thousand pounds!" gasped Jacqueline, her big eyes staring.

"Of course, the Old Top had to pay most of it. And he was quite sore over it, believe me. I told him it was the fortune of racing, and that one must take the ups with the downs, and that the world is full of a number of things. But he wouldn't listen to reason."

"He loses his temper very easily. Very hasty man. And when he has lost his temper it's simply no use trying to reason with him. Only makes him worse. He said the world was full of a number of fools, and I was the blindest of the lot. Then he gave me this in an envelope, and his blessing."

Teddy tapped his chest where the punctured shilling reposed.

"What became of Prinkipo?" asked Jacqueline.

"Sold him," said Teddy. "I had to sell him to help clear up the litter of my worthless life, so to speak. I paid 1,100 pounds for him, and spent another thousand or more training him; and I sold him for 200. I paid all that towards my indebtedness. The Old Top paid the rest, and I can tell you he was puffed about it."

"Fancy!" murmured Jacqueline. "Fancy meeting the owner of Prinkipo. This is just like a romance."

"It is a romance," returned Teddy. "But now I'm a beggar. That is to say I was a beggar last night, but since then I have acquired some means which ought to last me a few days with care."

Love's Reawakening

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADRIE GARRISON

Shaking the Trailing Detective

"WHAT do you suppose he means?" I said anxiously, when Mr. Train had repeated Mr. Hasbrouck's telephone message to me.

"It probably means that the fellow has been beaten than we gave him credit for," Mr. Train answered. "He may have asked the 'top' of Hasbrouck's waiting a ride down to Kingston with him, and the other two of my meeting them on the road and made four out of it."

"But why should he know where we are?"

"I am positive he doesn't," Mr. Train reassured quickly. "But I am sure he is hanging around on the chance of finding out. Now, let's see what would I do in a similar case if my suspicions were aroused that the man with me was a friend of the people I was trailing, and had an other friend trailing him. Let's re-construct."

He sat down and, leaning forward in his chair, traced his fingers on his knees and put his fingers widely spread, together with fingertips pressed against each other. He was patiently enjoying himself, but there was something convincing about his manner, which made me follow his re-constructing with interest.

"But on the whole," Mr. Hasbrouck left him, probably went to the ferry and inquired whether a car and occupants of this description had gone over on it this morning. There are not so many at this time, and the attendant would be sure to know. When he found my husband's gone that way, he'd have two alternatives, to hurry along the other road as fast as possible, or to follow the hunch he probably has by now that Hasbrouck and I are in cahoots with you, and are hiding you until he's safely away. Mind you, I'm only guessing this, but it's plausible, don't you think so?"

"Indeed I do," I said breathlessly. "Please go on."

"If he followed his hunch he probably would make the round of the hotels and find out if people of your description came there this morning. He would also make inquiries about Hasbrouck, whether they knew anybody by that name, and if so, who were his friends in town. He'd also describe my car and me, but there's one thing he hasn't got, and that's my license number. I hang a blanket over the radiator when I am preparing to work on the car, so the front license plate was covered, and I packed some carvings like over the rear one, so if he looked back he couldn't catch it."

"So?" Mr. Train continued complacently. "It's about seventy-five to twenty-five in our favor. Neither Hasbrouck nor I are prominent enough to stand out in a hotel clerk's memory—we're not the hotel kind of folks—never go there. And it would only be by accident that he'd run on to anybody else who might know us. Besides, the people up here are generally like myself they want to know why a stranger's asking questions before they answer them. And when they can't find out, they shut up like clams."

Train's Advice

"I hope you're right," I said, a bit dependently, for I had hoped to be well on my way to New York by this time.

"I'm sure I am," he returned. "Now, let's see what we can do."

CHEAP BREAD CHEATS BOYS AT PLAY

BOYS need all the sturdy strength of the best food... all the goodness, the nourishment of the best bread, for it is their most important food.

The boy told back by cheap food, lack of good nourishment, cheap bread, is stunted physically, mentally and morally. Mothers who stop to think, serve Holman for the rich nourishing goodness. Holman is the right kind of food for boys at play. Because its extra food-value makes it the least expensive of all good foods.

MANAGERS AIR VIEWS ON BASEBALL RACE

BIG LEAGUE LEADERS CONFIDENT AT START

Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy Expect To Finish in Top Position.

By the Associated Press.
ALTHOUGH the race for the big league pennant will be different later on, there is not a doubt as to the managers in either league as to the leaders of the clubs. Whether they have a chance to win but hope during the first of the season to do better than the last year's record, with an exception here and there, the points expect their clubs to do better than the last year's record. The champions, of course, do not improve their positions but they expect to be as good as they were.

Connie Mack has declined to make a forecast for the Athletics, but he believes his great team will repeat. Joe McCarthy, with reservations, picks the Cubs to lead the pack again.

The managers speak:
AMERICAN LEAGUE:
Connie Mack, Athletics—"The Athletics are not claiming a pennant because we realize every team has strengthened and we look forward to a close race."
Hoh. Shubert, Yankees—"Expect the Yankees to be in the race for we have added strength in new players and I have no fear about our pitching."

Stanley Harris, Tigers—"It would be foolish to claim a championship for no team can discount the strength of the Athletics and Yankees but I believe Detroit will be in the race. We are much better than we were at this time last season."
Roger Peckinpaugh, Indians—"We may have been lucky to finish third last year as some say but we have a good ball club and I am hopeful we can cause a great deal of trouble for the other clubs."

Minor League Confident
Bill Killefer, Browns—"It is true that we haven't as much punch as I would like to see but we have good pitchers and a lot of hustling young players. We should do well."
Walter Johnson, Senators—"I am sure Washington will have a hustling ball club, with good spirit and punching and I am confident it will make a better record than in 1932."
Donis Bush, White Sox—"No one can question the fact that the White Sox are a stronger club. Hitting of course will decide our place at the top, but our rate we shape up better than last year."

Hoh. Shubert, Yankees—"Expect the Yankees to be in the race for we have added strength in new players and I have no fear about our pitching."
Stanley Harris, Tigers—"It would be foolish to claim a championship for no team can discount the strength of the Athletics and Yankees but I believe Detroit will be in the race. We are much better than we were at this time last season."
Roger Peckinpaugh, Indians—"We may have been lucky to finish third last year as some say but we have a good ball club and I am hopeful we can cause a great deal of trouble for the other clubs."

Bill Killefer, Browns—"It is true that we haven't as much punch as I would like to see but we have good pitchers and a lot of hustling young players. We should do well."
Walter Johnson, Senators—"I am sure Washington will have a hustling ball club, with good spirit and punching and I am confident it will make a better record than in 1932."
Donis Bush, White Sox—"No one can question the fact that the White Sox are a stronger club. Hitting of course will decide our place at the top, but our rate we shape up better than last year."

Y INDUS CAGE FIVE BEATS SPHINX CLUB IN LAST HOME GAME

Locals Rout Youngstown Sphinx Team, 48 to 24; Gillis Scores 16 Points.

MARION Y Indus basketball team won its second string home game, routing Youngstown Sphinx club Saturday night 48 to 24. It was the last home game for the local five. They will complete their season this week and when they travel to Ann Arbor, Michigan to compete in the mid-western 3 M. C. A. tournament.

NATIONAL LEAGUE:
Joe McCarthy, Cubs—"Additional strength looks like to be the Cubs will repeat and beating accidents and Sox who are unfocused, the Cubs will come down to the finish. A winner."

Jewel Eas, Pirates—"I am every reason for being optimistic and with a true army of hitters combined with youth and speed the Pittsburgh team ought to be up there in the race, provided our players do not meet with too many injuries."

John J. McGraw, Giants—"We are cheerful as we prepare to open the season. Marshall will prove a good second baseman for us and the improvement in Ott's play is one of the most striking things I have seen in baseball."

Street Banks on Hurling
Gibby Street, Cardinals—"I am not saying that we will win the pennant but we have a good team and will figure in the race. I expect to see our pitchers do some great work."

Burt Shotton, Phillies—"I expect my club to finish in the first division if we don't get up there, the second division will be much stronger than I expect it to be."
Wilbert Robinson, Hobbs—"Brooklyn has been tremendously improved over last year's club and I will be very much surprised and disappointed if we are not in thick of the fight. Our invalids are well and we have added much strength."

Man Howley, Reds—"The Reds are quite a bit stronger than last year I believe and we all look forward to a real try for the first division. Given good pitching we will surprise the fans of Cincinnati."
Bill McKee, Braves—"We will have to feel our way along for a while but we have started the rebuilding program and we may be able to show some immediate results."

25,000 SEE YANKS PLAY

NEW YORK, April 14—Baseball is still the great national game, there was evidence today. More than 25,000 fans turned out yesterday to watch the Yankees defeat the Robins, 5 to 3, in the "house" that Ruth built. It was one of the biggest exhibition crowds on record at the stadium. The Yanks clubbed the formidable Adolpho Luque of the flock in the third, fourth and fifth innings and then garnered two more runs of "Jughandle Johnny" Morrison in the fatal seventh. Lou McEvoy checked the Robins.

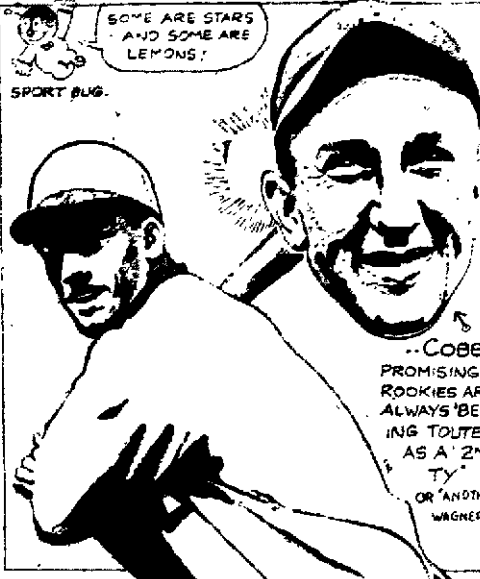

SOX FINISH WITH WIN

CHICAGO, April 14—Times were all bustled as the Chicago White Sox wound up their exhibition series with the New York Giants here yesterday. The Sox took a 5 to 4 victory, but the bats of the three Chicago pitchers played a vital part in all the runs, and Smokey Jolley, not rated as a defensive power, saved the game with a diving catch in the third inning.

CHAMPION CUBS LOSE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 14—The pre-season training activities of the championship Chicago Cubs was brought to a close today. It was an unassuming close for the barnstorming season, for the Kansas City Blues were on the long end of a 10 to 9 score in yesterday's final game. Al Shealy and Malcolm Moss, two rookies, hurled for the Cubs.

SPEAKING OF ROOKIES

ROOKIES--BASEBALL RECRUITS SALORE ARE NOW BLOSSOMING IN SPRING TRAINING--HOW MANY WILL MAKE GOOD?

The year 1933 is no exception to the rule that there must be a crowd of recruits in the various major league camps, all hoping to be successors to the immortal Ty Cobb. However, many are called but few are chosen. Most of them eventually find their way cleared back to the bushes... or straight home.

OPENING DAY DRAMA UNFOLDS TUESDAY

Walsh Picks Teams Which Have a Chance To Be in Pennant Race for 1930.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, April 14—To one who waits, the second is always a minute, the minute an hour and the hour a day and so the hands of the clock seemed listless, almost reluctant in a nation of fans who today awaited their annual tryst with professional baseball. For one day only, drama comes to baseball and touches it with the magic wand of romance, after which it blandly settles down to tedium and routine for the next six months.

That day falls due tomorrow, except in the city of Washington where with the Senators-Red Sox opening they decided to heat the afternoon, possibly because they feel they ought to make sure of beating something before the end of the season. The rest of them won't go for 24 hours and to hear their managers tell it in the strict privacy of the newspapers, they can hardly wait.

The fact of the matter is that about 10 of the 16 clubs might as well hire out to the Cotton States league. They won't be with us long enough to hear the third cheer in the customary series of three.

The Cubs, Giants and Pirates are natural first division clubs in the National league. Some of the others have a fighting chance, the rest of them have none.

Yanks and A's Lead

In the American league, the Athletics and Yankees are inevitable contenders, with Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit apparently to run a three-team race toward a two-prize finish. As a matter of fact, the form sheets say there are no contenders at all; just a couple of champions that won so far off in 1929 that they ought to be arrested if they don't repeat. None of the challenging clubs have been substantially improved. Some of them even have slipped back a little between seasons.

Take the National league, for example. The Giants still are looking for a centerfielder and may lack the right answer at another key position, second base. The Pirates have just traded away one of the best right hand pitchers in baseball, taking in exchange one of the most ordinary of the left hand pitchers in baseball. Their infield could be bolstered; in fact, I suspect that some of it even ought to be matted. The Cards also need infielders and pitchers. The spirit of rampant youth might help a little, too.

The significant feature of this situation is that the improved clubs are those who will have to come all the way from the second division before they can challenge anybody's leadership.

This is pretty much so in the American league, too, where we find the Tigers and White Sox generally expected to have bettered themselves over the off season.

Both finished well out of the money last year. The Yankees are supposed to furnish much of the contention, yet they have a new third baseman and left fielder, an old failure at shortstop and the question of whether Ruth will be Ruth and the pitchers will stand the racket.

So far as I can see, the Yanks simply have too many questions and not enough answers.

Indians Doubtful

The Indians have a few questions, too, with a kid combination at second base and the matter of whether Fosseca, the batting champion, will come up smiling from his recent illness. The Browns need another outfielder and their infield isn't championship class; the Tigers want come forward without pitchers and a shortstop, the White Sox have the same weakness as have the Dodgers, outfield defense, and the Senators simply have outlived themselves. Meantime, the Red Sox remain—the Red Sox.

The trade of Grimes to Boston will make the National league race tougher but this shouldn't discount our champion that has the hitting and pitching of the Cubs. Hornsby may have developed an improving feel but if Hartnett really has come back, the Cubs ought to slide into the pennant. That young man means a lot to the Chicago pitchers.

Speaking of which, the Phils have almost none, a fact that probably will keep them out of the first division. The Reds have none too many, either, but the real weakness of this outfit is found in their fielders who cannot hit and their batters who cannot field. The Braves need a new infield; also a new punch. In fact, anything new up there is liable to be better automatically.

As for the champion Athletics, the left side of their infield isn't fool proof. But they won a pennant and a world's championship with it last year, so they probably will decline to worry about this in a very potent manner. Besides, how can a club go wrong with those pitchers and hitters?
